Crash Injures Couple

Two persons were taken to Royal Jubilee Hospital early this morning and the brother of one of the victims was in a second crash minutes later while going for help. Both accidents happened on Royal Oak Avenue.

In poor condition at Royal Jubilee Hospital is Mary Atkins, 18, of 2240 Torquay Drive, with a possible skull fracture and other injuries.

Michael Newton, 22, of 667 Ralph Street, who police said was the driver of the car, suffered a fractured leg and other injuries.

Saanich police under Sgt. Cecil Pearce said the car driven by Michael Newton, left Royal Oak Avenue, traveled several hundred feet off the road and crashed against a stump.

They added that a second car driven by Robert Roy Newton, brother of the injured driver, was following the first car.

Robert Newton left his passengers to care for his brother and the injured girl and was going for help when his car was forced off the road and overturned in a ditch. Police said he was uninjured.

The injured were taken to hospital by Saanich police and C. & C. Ambulance services.

The car was damaged beyond repair and was towed to a garage for investigation.

Shannon Bell Handed Over

A Royal Marine and other officers stand by on the quarter-deck of the British cruiser Superb in Halifax Harbor as Vice-Admiral Sir Richard Symonds-Taylor hands over the famous Shannon bell to his old Canadian shipmate, Rear Admiral

Forest Closure, Drought Cost B.C. $23,400,000

Production, Crops, Wages Bear Brunt

By BILL MAVOR

The Vancouver Forest District closure and coastal drought have cost British Columbians approximately $23,400,000.

Provincial government and Colonist calculations show the losses suffered in wages, lumber and agriculture production, and retail store sales.

The forest closure, one month old today, has cost $20,000,000 in delayed timber production of 312,000,000 board feet and at least $2,400,000 in loggers' and other lumber industry wages.

Last agriculture production during the drought is estimated at $1,000,000.

HIGHER PRICES—Losses in lumber and agricultural industries, many continuing to spread, with consumers quickly feeling higher retail costs of forest products.

Most of the 12,000 loggers forced out of jobs by the closure work on Vancouver Island. No rain and Victoria National Employment Service offices have received thousands of registrations.

There is practically no demand for help in the industry.

International Woodworkers of America estimate 3,200 men are idle in the Dunsmuir region alone.

Some of the men have already been placed on a three-day work week in order to keep mills operating as long as possible.

Logging companies said their main work now is to transfer logs from reserve lands to mill ponds. The companies, less on booming and towing work from loggers, camps is unestimated.

FOR 10 MONTHS—Association spokesmen estimated the forest closure effects would remain for about 10 months. "One good general rain immediately would help us back on our feet," he added.

Despite setbacks, there is no possibility of being unable to fulfill the United Kingdom contract.

Independent Vancouver Island lumber dealers reported yesterday that the forest closure and the United States market had stiffened lumber prices. Prices of common grade lumber jumped from $5 to $10 a thousand feet.

A good United States market, new defense contracts and lost production could mean short supplies for domestic buyers, he warned.

SALES DOWN—More immediate effects of the closure were being felt at Lady Smith, Duncan and Nanaimo where stores reported sales off 15 per cent and credit buying increased.

Victoria stores reported little effect but said any closing of mills would be felt.

Farmers meanwhile predicted higher milk prices. Pastures have been burned beyond use for cattle feed and winter fodder is being used. This may mean higher prices, they say as feed costs increase.

AGRICULTURAL LOSS—Agricultural losses at Saanich and Gordon Head are estimated at more than $100,000 by the provincial government. Losses caused by the 60-day-old drought in all coast areas are estimated at $1,000,000.

Herb crops, pasture and other seasonal crops were badly affected.

New British Rifle Makes Bow

Britain's long-awaited .280 calibre rifle was unveiled and put through its paces at Warminster, England, Friday. Soldier at right holds old .303 Enfield, longer and heavier than new stockless rifle held by soldier at left. New weapon also uses lighter ammunition, to ease supply problems. Firing tests were described as impressive. AP Wirephoto.

Must Build European Defences In Year or Leave—Eisenhower

WASHINGTON, Aug. 11 (INS)—Gen. Eisenhower was disclosed tonight to have told senators visiting him in Europe that if western Europe's defenses can not be built in a "reasonable time" the United States had "better get out."

The European supreme commander's statement was contained in a document of "high light notes" on conferences the foreign relations committee members had between July 7 and July 22.

The conferences were with Eisenhower, former Prime Minister Churchill of Britain, Generalissimo Franco of Spain, President Auriol of France, British Prime Minister Attlee and heads of state in Greece and Turkey.

EISENHOWER DETERMINED—The notes, transcribed for the benefit of the nine senators who made the European foreign and inspection trip, pictured Eisenhower as confident and determined. He was reported as saying the senators that if he needed more than the six U.S. divisions of ground troops now planned for his defense force he would ask for them.

Eisenhower said: "A sure way to get half a result at twice the cost is to drag this program out. If we can't do the job in a reasonable length of time it can't be done and we'd better get out."

"We can't ship in heart and brains but we can give encouragement needed, so they can develop them."

The highlight notes also reported that:

1. Franco told the senators that Spain is a "deserted country" and that for this reason freedom of the press and assembly must be restricted. Franco said that Spain could build a 2,000,000-man army but whether his country would join in a general war if Russia struck would depend upon the circumstances.

ATTLEE OPPOSED—2. Attlee, opposing Spanish recognition in the past, commented that some people still believe one can "sweep with the devil safely with a long spoon."

3. Churchill voiced impatience with the Labor government's reluctance to renew full relations with the Franco government.

4. Auriol said that Spain's participation in the North Atlantic Treaty Alliance would alienate many Frenchmen.

5. Turkish President Celal Bayar wants to see his country in the defense alliance.

King Paul and Queen Frederika of Greece urged that NATO powers make greater use of Greece as a power for building strength for attack rather than only a place to defend.

YEARS GRACE—Eisenhower's reference to a "reasonable length of time" was not amplified but associates in Washington have indicated in the past that the general believes the European defense setup should be a going concern within a year or there is little hope of success.

Eisenhower reportedly told the senators:

"It takes a man and a gun to fight. The United States is providing the gun. Europe the man, and that shows real sacrifice."

Abolition of Milk Board Held Key to Lower Prices

The cost of milk is in the news again. To explain the dilemma of the producer and distributor, who want more money, and the public, who wants to pay less, The Colonist today presents the fourth in a series of articles on the subject by Laurie Joslin, staff reporter.

By LAURIE JOSLIN—There are some people who believe the milk board should be scrapped and controls lifted from the dairy industry.

During the last session of the legislature this opinion was strongly voiced by A. J. McDonnell, a coalition member for Vancouver Centre.

Competition, he said, is responsible for the progress that has been made in North America and the high standard of living enjoyed by North Americans. He welcomed government plans to wipe out gasoline controls and declared the government should not stop there, but go on and discard the curbs on the dairy industry.

GUARANTEED PROFIT—The member claimed that the price fixed by the milk board for sale of milk guaranteed a profit to the most inefficient and un-economic producer and distributor.

Without competition there was no incentive for producers and distributors to increase efficiency, improve economy and increase production in order to lower the price, declared Mr. McDonnell.

Producers and distributors he described as a selected class who do not have to exert themselves in order to gain their livelihood, because profit on operations is guaranteed by government regulations.

SOME AGREE—Some experts close to the dairy industry agree with Mr. McDonnell that there is no great necessity for a milk board to regulate conditions in the industry during good times.

They caution, however, that within a matter of months following the disappearance of the board, the price of a quart of standard milk would leap to 25 or 30 cents, or higher.

A board is most needed in hard times, say the experts.

Then work in industry and business is harder to find. Numerous small land holders branch out as part-time dairymen to supplement their incomes. Regulations then are needed to maintain a high standard in the industry for the protection of the consumer.

These same experts believe people are prone to make a scapegoat of the milk board because it is something solid on which they can fasten blame for a condition which is really part of the general present-day inflationary economy.

In reply to the argument that a set profit is guaranteed to the entire industry, it has been learned that the milk board sets an average on operations.

In the case of distributors the board sets this average and some distributors in Victoria operate above the level and show a bigger profit. Others operate below the average, close to the red line of their ledgers. Since the board came into being two local dairies have failed because they could not prevent operating costs from forcing them into the red.

A great many Island producers have failed for the same reason.

Check Forging Tied to Drugs

WASHINGTON, Aug. 11 (INS)—The chief of the U.S. secret service said today that dope peddlers give drugs free to minors to make them addicts and then get them to steal and forge government checks to buy more narcotics.

U. E. Baughman, the secret service head, tied the narcotics racket directly to check-forging schemes in a report to Treasury Secretary Snyder covering his agency's work for the year ending June 30.

The report said that the narcotics racket is a major source of funds for the check-forging racket.

New Budget Due in Fall

OTTAWA, Aug. 12 (CP)—A federal budget, Canada's second of the current fiscal year, will be brought down by Finance Minister Douglas Abbott in the fall session of Parliament.

Government sources say it will be a special budget, as opposed to the government's regular annual financial accounting, in the same sense as the "baby" budget introduced at the special session last September.

That budget was required because of the outbreak of the Korean war and the stepped-up tempo of Canada's defense preparations.

This one will be necessitated by the arrangements for financing the universal $40-a-month old-age pensions which go into effect Jan. 1 for Canadians of 70 and over.

The government hasn't yet said how it plans to finance the pensions, which will add $230,000,000 a year to federal expenditures.

The Finance Department still is studying the problem and is expected to recommend weekly or monthly deductions from the pay envelopes of Canada's wage-earners.

Meeting at Government House

Give Out No Information On Plans for Royal Visit

Strict secrecy surrounds a summit meeting held at Government House late yesterday morning to discuss plans for the royal reception of Princess Elizabeth and Prince Philip.

The Royal couple are slated to spend three days here.

Plans for the royal reception are being drawn up by a committee headed by 45-year-old secretary W. T. Smith. The group will work closely with civil officials.

A Government House spokesman said yesterday no plans would be made public until they had been approved by authority in Ottawa.

A decision time has been set for receipt in Ottawa of suggestions from industrial centres across the country. Victoria's program will reach Ottawa in time, he said.

The Royal couple will arrive here from Vancouver on the afternoon of October 14 and the destroyer Crusader. They will leave October 19, returning to Vancouver on Nanaimo.

Mayor Percy George said he will discuss with provincial government.

Crack Train Goes Off Rails

FOUR OAKS, N.C., Aug. 12 (Sunday) (AP)—A crack Atlantic coast line passenger train was wrecked about two miles north of here shortly before 2 a.m. (E.S.T.) today. Four or five cars were derailed. All doctors and ambulances from surrounding communities were summoned to the scene.

ALL ABOARD

By G. E. Mortimore

The warm days melt away so fast that you have no time to savor them. Perhaps it is a mistake to watch the calendar too closely, because such observation reminds you of lost chances and tasks undone or too long postponed.

It seems a short while ago that the two families of wild mallard came chirping and skittering past the wharf, little balls of down shepherded along by their mother. Now they are full-grown ducks. Fully one-third of them have been killed by dogs, boys and beasts of prey.

The survivors swim to our float and quack faintly as they struggle for bits of bread.

The lake has ebbed far down, so that the end of the float rests almost on dry land. For weeks now I have been promising to swing it farther out and get a new anchor. Now at last I have made a beginning. My neighbor Bill poured some concrete in a nail keg for me, and embedded a chain in it. The float should be in place by the time the swimming season is over.

All summer long I have promised to fix the diving board which neighboring teenagers broke in June. In mid-July I got around to ordering a new bracket from the machine shop. Every day the man at the shop said: "Been very busy. Have it ready tomorrow for sure."

In three weeks, tomorrow came. Then I found I had been a fraction of an inch out in my measurements. Neighbor Norman, who is a handyman, cut a couple of notches in the board, and now we can dive again.

All summer long I have meant to fix the steps and mow the rest of the lawn. The steps were finally fixed last Thursday. My father did the job when he came to stay.

Until a fortnight ago the lawn remained a shaggy wilderness. But now I have shorn and subdued two-thirds of it. The clover and dandelions, and even some grass here and there, grows rich and green on the gentle slope to the lake.

Near the shore there is a brown patch, the shape of a boat sailing across the lawn. That's where the rowboat lay for weeks, before Bill caulked it for me and I finished painting it.

The grass under the cedar tree grows tall and spindly, but I am hacking my way a little farther into the jungle every Sunday, and by the time winter comes I will have a whole lawn.

The kittens, small enough to fit in the palm of the hand only a few weeks ago, are now half-grown cats. They scamper through the long grass. Sometimes they go down on the float and flick the water with a timid paw.

My half-dozen sad little tomato seedlings have become lanky giants. The vine in front of the house is sagging under an enormous crop of grapes. The raspberries have all disappeared (mostly down the throats of little boys and girls). Clusters of blackberries are ripening.

Youngsters splash and yell in the lake all day long. They have the sense to enjoy a good thing while it lasts. But fretful grown-ups can feel the nip of the cooler evenings and sense the coming decay of this happy season even before it is ripe.

I wonder if my neighbors are any good at shoveling snow?

Saanich Jersey Club Endorses Milk Price Boost Application

Saanich Jersey Cattle Club has endorsed the stand of Vancouver Island Dairywomen's Association in applying for a milk price increase to the producer.

The association application is scheduled to be heard before the provincial milk board next week. Reporting on activities of the calf club, president R. Godfrey said two Saanich club members placed third among 98 entries in a judging class during a visit to Arrowsmith Farms, Qualicum. Other calf club trips included judging Holstein heifers at the H. Robinson farm, Prospect Lake, and the Cowichan Jersey Cattle Club field day, Cowichan Station. The meeting, at the home of J. W. C. Barclay, laid plans for strong entries in the Jersey classes at the North and South

Horticultural Society Enters Fight To Save Buttle Lake From Damming

The Victoria Horticultural Society has joined forces with other conservation interests in the battle of Buttle Lake.

In a brief to be presented tomorrow when hearings on the issue continue here in the Crystal Garden, the horticultural group claims the application of the power commission to raise the level of the lake is ultra vires, and charges the commission with failure to comply with requirements of the Strathcona Park Act.

CALCULATED PLAN
The horticultural group maintains the application of the power commission is part of a calculated plan to trespass in, despoil and exploit our public parks.

The brief also calls for immediate publication of an official report dealing with Buttle Lake and Strathcona Park, which it claims was prepared by E. G. Oldham, forester in charge of the parks division.

WANTS EXPLANATION
It urges that "the minister responsible for concealing that report be required to give his explanation for doing so at this inquiry."

The horticultural group also charges the B.C. Power Commission with withholding information that would be detrimental to its application, and of "deliberately underestimating the destruction that its contemplated project would cause."

"In proof of this contention," the brief says, "the society makes reference to Order in Council No. 2055, approved Sept. 17, 1949, whereby mining is actually permitted in a number of class 'A' parks."

Traffic Snarl
SUFFERN, N.Y., Aug. 11.—An overturned truck today caused one of the worst traffic tie-ups in New York state's history—with automobiles stalled along a 16-mile stretch for 6½ hours.

New Yorkers bound north along Route 17 for the Catskills and other resort areas for the week-end lost half a day of their available time and in some cases abandoned their trips altogether. The truck, heavily loaded with office paper supplies, turned upside down across the four-lane highway after a collision with an automobile and spilled part of its contents.

Traffic halted on either side of the accident scene, blocking other trucks which were dispatched to haul away the truck and its contents.

Natural Beauty Hard to Match

Yugoslavia Offers Much In Way of Tourist Lure

DUBROVNIK, Yugoslavia, Aug. 12 (AP).—Yugoslavia has flung open its doors to visitors, and the country is now open to the west to build up good-will and bring in some spending money.

Marshal Tito's proud and independent Communist government desperately needs both to safeguard its freedom from the Russian-led Cominform.

Yugoslavia has much to offer in return. From the emerald hues of its snow-capped mountains in northern Slovenia, to the cobalt blues of the sunny Adriatic, there's hardly a land this world over that can match its sheer natural beauty.

Hard-pressed for money and material to rebuild after the Second World War, Yugoslavia has just begun to capitalize upon the assets endowed by nature and history.

It has been tough going.

Oddities

BALTIMORE, Aug. 11 (AP).—Ralph Straube drove along a highway yesterday with only the singing of his tires against the long concrete road to break the silence.

He had covered 10 miles of his trip from Baltimore to Philadelphia when a thought suddenly exploded in his mind. "Where's my wife?"

Straube turned back to a Baltimore gas station where Mrs. Straube was tapping her toe on the concrete.

He had driven away without his wife after she went into the ladies' room, Straube explained.

EDMONTON, Aug. 11 (CP).—Something new in shoplifting? A man who insisted on arrest.

Embassies Said Funnel For Spies

WASHINGTON, Aug. 11 (AP).—Senator McCarran (Dem.-Nev.) said today that Communist embassies in Washington "have become a huge funnel channeling spies and saboteurs into this country."

McCarran made the charge in a statement accompanying a report from a unit of the Senate's internal security subcommittee which he heads.

This unit's formal report said the Truman administration has failed to make full use of its powers to rid the U.S. of subversive aliens.

DEPARTMENTS TIMID
"Apparently the State and Justice departments are too timid to use the power of the Internal Security Act to drive dangerous elements from this country," McCarran stated.

The senators' report was based on closed-door testimony taken here and in New York city in recent months.

The secret hearings dealt chiefly with the admission to U.S. of persons with diplomatic or semi-diplomatic status.

The subcommittee's report called on the State and Justice departments to launch a vigorous program for the enforcement of these provisions "forthwith."

Police Order Pair Arrested In Gang Deaths

LOS ANGELES, Aug. 11 (INS).—Police today issued an all-points bulletin for the arrest of two men identified as "muscle experts" in connection with the gangland slaying of Tony Brancato and Tony Trombino.

The two were identified as Charles Battaglia, alias Charlie Batts, 38, and Angelo Polizzi, also 38.

Authorities say that the arrest of the pair may solve the double slaying for which five suspects have already been jailed. Police said Battaglia and Polizzi are close associates of the No. 1 suspect in the murders, Jimmy Frattiano.

Capt. James Hamilton, head of the police intelligence unit, said Battaglia's name came up as an interested party in the conversations between Trombino, Frattiano and Sam Lazex last week-end.

Battaglia is also a suspect in a Las Vegas casino holdup for which Nevada authorities were trying to extradite the slain Brancato, Capt. Hamilton said.

Battaglia has a long police record, Hamilton said. Polizzi has no local record but is known to be an associate of Nicola Licata, another suspect under arrest.

They say he would employ his gift of oratory to stir the country as he did in the grim days after Dunkerque, and leave the detailed administration to his lieutenants.

The Tories accuse Labor of doing many things wrongly. But they have been unable to find specific remedies for many of the evils they rail against.

The Conservatives cry loudly against high taxes but haven't said what taxes could safely be cut.

They protest the high cost of the welfare state but would be unable to cut it much without inviting political suicide.

Churchill advocates private enterprise and an end to economic controls. But lately he has ceased to hold up Belgium and the United States as examples; Belgium's post-war economic freedom has led to unemployment, and the United States is increasing controls.

U.N. Relief Agencies Winning Anti-Red Fight

By PIERRE J. HUSS
FLUSHING MEADOW, N.Y., Aug. 11 (INS).—The battle to stem Communism—as spread by the Soviet Union in lands where hunger and poverty are the rule—is being today won inch-by-inch on a global scale.

U.N. relief and special agencies estimate that 200,000,000 are easy prey to Communist spies.

President Truman's "bold new program"—popularly known as Point Four—set the keynote and, in alliance with U.N. agencies, is winning a war which plays a role in promoting democracy just as important as the battle against Communist aggression.

MAKING FOOD AVAILABLE
Boiling down the Point Four program to actual field work shows the following:

The Food and Agricultural Organization, a specialized U.N. agency, is concentrating on making food available to hungry millions by showing them how to grow it in quantity and with maximum results.

In close co-operation with national governments, F.A.O. is improving seeds, bettering the strains of crops and reducing or eliminating pests and blights.

The corn yield in northern Italy was increased by 25 per cent by the use of hybrid seed.

In 1950 the International Bank for reconstruction and development authorized loans of over $275,000,000 for power development in Brazil, India and Mexico, for flood control in Iraq, for port development and irrigation in Thailand, and for various other development projects.

For the first year of an expanded program of technical assistance and economic development, 54 governments pledged to the United Nations technical assistance board $20,000,000.

A $30,000,000 to $35,000,000 budget now is under study for the coming year. Under study for 1952, 265 requests for assistance had been received from 55 governments.

At that date, 145 projects had been initiated or approved in 38 countries requiring the services of more than 500 experts. From further discussions then under way, 150 additional projects are expected to result.

A few random examples: Afghanistan will be sent six U.N. experts to aid economic development and five F.A.O. men to aid agricultural development, including the improvement of the Karakul sheep industry, expansion of cotton culture and livestock disease control.

To Burma will go two experts to work on cottage industries and one for forest industries. Ceylon has requested nine experts on dry land farming, sugar cane culture, animal industry, farm management and forestry.

India seeks one expert in housing, another in criminology, three for forestry, 10 for scientific research and five for anti-biotic production.

So the list runs over many pages, all part of the 20th-century struggle for human freedom.

Station Peter Repaying Effort

ESTABLISHED on November 24 last as part of Canada's contribution to an international chain of weather recording stations in the Pacific, Station Peter has given much useful service since. This has been reflected in the improved accuracy of the meteorological reports upon which weather forecasts are based; in additional aids to navigation at sea, and in an important check on flying weather. There was some doubt at the time of its inception as to the results in relation to the expense, but practical benefits have been accruing since. For the past nine months two weather ships, the Stonehouse and the St. Catharines, have maintained the watch by alternating in six-week periods.

Geographically, Station Peter is an otherwise unmarked position in the Pacific at Lat. 50 N. and Long. 145 W. Its importance stems from the fact that ships on station there give recordings of weather changes several hundreds of miles out in the Pacific west of this continent. Useful in itself, Station Peter fits into a chain of six weather stations which together bracket the Pacific far to the west of the continental coastline. This chain of weather reporting stations was set up under international convention for the mutually important purpose of filling the gaps in previous meteorological charts, which arose largely through the scarcity of shipping in the Pacific on long-established trade routes to the Orient and elsewhere. Nor will that condition change until world trade is restored in more settled times.

Meanwhile, however, Canada's getting good value for the two vessels used in servicing Station Peter, and should lose no time in converting the third ship, the St. Stephen, as a relief vessel in support of the other two. It is a lonely service far out in the Pacific out of sight of all land, but the data gathered on Station Peter is of very real value to this country and to the world. Set against that the costs, while impressive, do not appear to be onerous.

Breaching the Lottery Law

ATTORNEY-GENERAL WISMER having put his foot down, the famous Fraser River barrel roll will not take place. Like the Kelowna regatta time-guessing contest, the New Westminster event has run foul of the lottery laws and discretion has caused its abandonment.

This is all very right and proper and Mr. Wismer cannot be criticized for refusing to sanction a breach in the law. His conversion comes rather late, however. The New Westminster barrel has been rolling down the Fraser annually at this time for 10 years now, and Mr. Wismer has been Attorney-General for the last half of this period. If the barrel guessing competition is illegal now it was illegal last year, the year before that and so on back to its inception. Why has he waited so long to intervene?

Past inertia has merely invited the contest's perpetuation and after 10 years its sponsors could be excused for assuming it to be permissible. Other alleged lotteries undoubtedly have been staged under the same impression. The recent crack-down, therefore, while legitimate since the law is the law and must be obeyed, adds to the confusing state of lotteries and prize-drawings throughout the province.

Some sweepstakes go on, some do not. There is no uniformity about the enforcement of lottery laws. As with fire regulations which some fire chiefs enforce and others ignore, so with prize drawings and the like—they seemingly depend on the whims of police officers, thus creating a palpably absurd situation. Has the Attorney-General ever considered this aspect of breaches of the law he now will not sanction?

Widely Known in Province

THE SUDDEN passing of Mr. William F. Kennedy, B.C. liquor commissioner, at his home in Victoria on Friday closed a notable career in the public life of the province. For 21 years Mr. Kennedy served on the B.C. liquor commission and for most of that time as sole commissioner. Although the administration he handled was among the most contentious services of the province, Mr. Kennedy was held in uniformly high regard for personal traits of integrity, fairness and wisdom which earned for him a host of sincere and genuine friends. To a notable degree he exemplified all that is best in the provincial civil service, and his passing now will leave a gap that the government will find difficult to fill.

Born in Ontario, Mr. Kennedy came to British Columbia as a young lad in 1891, grew up and was educated in Vernon, where he held many public offices in the civic administration. He served a term in the B.C. Legislature as Conservative member for North Okanagan, but relinquished the seat in 1930 to serve under the late H. B. Thomson as part of a three-man liquor commission. Two years later Mr. Kennedy was named sole commissioner, in which capacity he became well known throughout Canada. Few men had a deeper knowledge of British Columbia or had watched more of its development at first hand. For two decades he had made his home in Victoria, where his wife predeceased him a few years ago.

HOSPITAL INSURANCE

Sir—A few days ago The Colonist published a letter from me re the H.I.S., comparing it with Alberta's scheme.

I have since been advised that there are certain services rendered under the British Columbia scheme which are not included in that of Alberta, such as X-ray, special drugs, operating room, laboratory and pathological care. These services, of course, considerably lessen the margin of difference between the two provinces.

D. R. HOOPER

HOSPITAL INSURANCE

Sir—Referring to the letter of Mr. J. Mitchell, C.C.F. candidate in the coming by-election, his statements are in direct opposition to what is told by past and present residents of Alberta.

That the policies of that government are satisfactory to Albertans is evident by the fact that Social Credit has been in power for fifteen years and still has a majority of 50 members, whereas the C.C.F. has but three; which must, of course, be very galling to the latter.

Certainly the Blue Cross operates in Alberta, as do other efficient private insurance companies, though none of these are allowed to operate in British Columbia under the Coalition.

Government hospital insurance in Alberta is administered by the municipalities, and I expect this arrangement was what confused Mr. Mitchell. Any resident can join the latter or not, as he wishes. The terms are as stated in my previous letter.

As to the oil and gas being responsible for Alberta's wellbeing, may I point out that the natural resources of this province are worth about five times as much.

HOSPITAL INSURANCE

Sir—I have read with much interest what Sister Theresa and Dr. Mooney of Vanderhoof Hospital had to say to the hospitals inquiry board. The $13.60 per ward bed per diem paid by H.I.S. to Vancouver General Hospital is altogether too high, as is proved when other hospitals receive only $6 per diem. It has been apparent for some time that the whole setup of our larger hospitals should be investigated most thoroughly, beginning with capital investment, government and municipal grants for buildings and otherwise, administration and all other angles which Kellogg and Stevenson deem it necessary to bore into so as to bring the basic public ward rate down. What about all the extra revenue received for private rooms, X-ray for outpatients, and a dozen other things they get revenue from? It seems to me that a thorough shake-up of the whole issue is needed. The government advertisement re what H.I.S. pays Vancouver General and the attempted explanation is not clear to the average reader. The advertisement mentions what the hospitals charge, and that the per diem municipal and British Columbia Government grants of $1.40 are "added" to the charge of $11.10 per day. That is money received and should not be "added" to "costs" or to what they choose to ask the government to pay. In our free enterprise system, when operated without combine, the larger the volume of business usually means the lower the unit cost; in the case of our larger hospitals the more volume they handle, the higher the unit cost. The government is certainly having a difficult time with H.I.S. and will continue to have until drastic reforms re costs are made, and that without undue expense in administration, etc., to bring it about. Private enterprise could certainly do a better job.

CONVEYING PETS

Sir—I have been surprised at the idea which some folks seem to have that animals and birds can get along with little or no air. Caged birds either left with no covering at night or swathed round and round with a thick cloth through which no air can penetrate. It would make for less discomfort if not actual suffering if people sending small animals in cardboard boxes would make a point of boring holes for ventilation from the inside, and good sized ones, as cardboard has a tendency to close up if the holes are small. Paper bags containing birds are banned in England, many hapless baby chicks and cage birds having met a miserable end by suffocation in such containers.

Another matter is the carrying of dogs in the luggage compartment of a car. It is still done by the unthinking. The darkness and airlessness and fumes in such places must render it a veritable Hot of Calcutta. There is much more due to our animal friends in the way of thoughtful consideration than in many circumstances they at present receive.

Thinking Aloud

"... of shoes—and ships—and sealing wax—of cabbages and kings."

By TOM TAYLOR

THREE months now I've been transplanted, and I sense a bit how plants feel when they are uprooted and plunked into a new plot of earth.

Environment, if you are a creature of moods, is no less important to humans than to tomatoes. Both have to become acclimatized before they feel filled with their old vigor.

Not that I felt at all anaemic just because I departed from where I was before I came to where I am now. In point of fact I surprised myself.

You will remember, maybe, that I murmured aloud nostalgically when leaving the shabby room wherein I had been wont to conjure up my—er—masterpieces. And how it was I cast a last look round its familiar walls and wondered if my new office would warm equally my mental cockles.

Well, it did, and does. Unlike the tomato I suffered no shock from transplanting. You might say of course why should I, and not without reason. Aren't newspaper fellows supposed to be immune to disturbing influences? Don't they write with equal facility (such as it might be), whether in a crowded railway station or a secluded library?

If put to it, yes, most of them do; but they like a cosy nook of their own too—when they can get it.

I'm lucky. I've got it.

I said I surprised myself; that's true, I did. As I mentioned once before, I think I have a lovely window out which to gaze, and I fondly imagined I'd spend countless hours just looking out of it, my mind, as usual, empty.

Believe it or not, I scarcely ever peek through my Venetian blinds. This is not to imply my mind is overflowing with thought (heavens, no) just to record a fact. The miracle was fortuitous, the result of physical fad.

You see, when I moved in and arranged my furniture, fustily after the fashion of a good housewife, I finally decided to put my typewriter table at right angles to the window. That means I'm looking, when in search of inspiration, at bare plaster. (Oh, I've got pictures on the walls, too, and the cutest calendar you ever saw, all about central heating for kilns—but the spot level with my eyes is bare.)

The plaster, however, is green, and you know how soothing this color is. When I sit down to peck at the keys—as eventually I do daily after much mental humming and hawing—I'm as calm as a cucumber that's never been transplanted. (What a fib, Tom, and on a Sunday too.)

Anyway, I don't look out the window, not often at least.

I suppose, having gone this far, I should describe the rest of my room.

To my right, as I'm typing, is a large glass-topped desk. I swivel round to this when a visitor comes in, to show I'm not a mere typist, you know, and to ape the big executive. But alas, you can't see the glass top for the litter on it, which I suspect destroys this affectation. Then I have a hatstand, although no hat to hang on it, and a bookcase, full of the stuff that makes up for the lack of native wit, and, naturally, a door.

Outside this door is the newsroom, where the real workers of the department are. Right now, as I glance in their direction, I see nothing but heads bent studiously to their tasks, and hear the tap-tap-tap of furious fingers spelling out the news you will read on the other pages this morning. And here I am fumbling about—what?

They shame me.

So I'll quit. Anyway, I'm really only rhapsodizing thuswise because a reader asks: "How are you doing in your new office?"

Jottings From Britain

By H. J. J. SARGINT

North American Newspaper Alliance

LONDON—A remarkable advertisement appeared this week in The Daily Herald, official organ of the Labor party, and mouthpiece of the British Socialist Government. The notice said:

"The National Oil Company of Iran is prepared to sell crude oil and oil products, i.e., Abadan or Bandar Mashur." It went on to describe the way in which payments are to be made, either against the opening of credits and documents in the name of the National Oil Company of Iran, at an approved bank in Iran, or against drafts on dollars, transferable to pounds sterling, Swiss francs or Indian rupees. The important words are at the end of the notice, which said: "Tankers to be provided by buyers."

In other words, the Iranian Government is ready to sell the products of the Abadan oil refinery to anyone who can produce a tanker.

This advertisement is not particularly surprising in itself, but it is surprising to see it published in The Daily Herald. Judicially, the sale of oil at Abadan by the so-called National Oil Company of Iran is the sale of stolen property, and the British Government of which The Daily Herald is the mouthpiece, is the majority owner of the Anglo-Iranian Oil Company.

Commenting on this situation, The Daily Telegraph pointedly remarked: "The owner (through his newspaper) is acting as fence for the burglar who has robbed him. The value of the Abadan refinery is estimated at $1,400,000,000. The fence's fee for printing the advertisement is, it is calculated, about $61."

The British difficulties in the Middle East are not restricted to Iran. It is anticipated that the Anglo-Egyptian dispute, of which the main subject of friction is the future of the Sudan, will be revived when parliament meets again in the fall.

Meanwhile, Egypt is moving heaven and earth to obtain some kind of foothold among the Sudanese which can be put forward as a genuine national demand for the union of the Sudan with Egypt. In the Sudan there is a political party known as the Ashigga movement, which demands union with Egypt.

The movement is largely sponsored by the Egyptians with Egyptian money, and this correspondent has learned that a serious split has occurred between the Egyptians and the Ashigga party, not so much over politics, but over pickings. The president of the Ashigga party recently dismissed the party's secretary, who for that reason lost a monthly payment of $420 which he was receiving from the Egyptian Government, and also the usual occasional sums which went into his pocket from the funds the Egyptians furnished for propaganda.

A number of the party's followers, moreover, have gone over to the support of the British administration's efforts to frame a constitution for an independent Sudan. This dispute, which has brought clearly to light the amount of interference that Egypt is exercising in Sudanese party affairs, is believed to have put back the union movement considerably.

This correspondent has reason to believe that the United States state department, in the future, will support British policy in the Middle East more energetically than heretofore. This is the feeling prevailing in London diplomatic circles at the moment.

Provincial Capitals

(From Saturday Night, Toronto)

A COLUMNIST in The Ottawa Citizen has looked over the ten provincial capitals Princess Elizabeth and Prince Philip are to visit and has come up with the challenging observation that of them all Regina has done the best job in providing an impressive setting for provincial parliament buildings.

The setting at Regina is an example of man's triumph over nature, of an artificial island-studded lake and man-planted woodlands replacing a treeless plain and a dismal slough. But while we agree with the Ottawa columnist that Regina has done the best job of all ten provinces in creating a setting worthy of provincial government buildings, we would like to go further and look at the buildings themselves.

We would nominate Ontario's Legislative Buildings as the worst example of government architecture in Canada and recall Province House in Halifax as the most satisfying, with perhaps one of the least impressive settings. Manitoba's lofty dome atop the white limestone buildings is impressive. Its cost was widely advertised, and we remember Justice Minister Garson as late as 1939 remarking that the buildings had cost $9,000,000, that Manitoba had paid off $9,000,000 and still owed $9,000,000.

It is unfortunate that modern tax write-offs which operate on private buildings and make it an expensive luxury to maintain antiquated structures do not apply to government offices, or we might get rid of some of our uglier public buildings. Unfortunately the new cannot be counted on to be better than the old. It is not many years since Ontario added the big east block. Referring to this structure, Professor Eric Arthur made the devastating comment: "Future generations will wonder that such things could be."

From Files of The Daily British

Colonist for August, 1864

FIRE hazard was acute around Victoria during the hot, dry summer of 1864. There were no slogans like "Save Our Forests," or "Keep Vancouver Island Green," but The Daily British Colonist warned people to be careful with their camp fires.

"For the last few days the noble, snow-capped Olympian range of mountains which form so grand a feature in our southern scenery, have been totally obscured from view by the density of smoke from bush fires raging on both sides of the Straits."

"Indeed, the fires to the westward of Victoria are so general, and emit such clouds of smoke, that it is only now and then that the eye can reach as far as Benchy Head."

"These fires are probably attributable to carelessness on the part of travelers to the diggings (gold-mines at Sooke) in not extinguishing their camp fires. At this season of the year it is only necessary to apply the torch to the dry undergrowth and the conflagration rapidly extends."

Victoria's firemen were doing brave work with their antique, hand-drawn engines—contraptions which, to a modern eye, wouldn't seem capable of putting out the kitchen stove.

"At one o'clock the alarm bells commenced ringing vigorously, and the firemen were soon seen toiling with their engines over to the woods in James Bay, where it was found that the residents were more alarmed than hurt, the fire being confined to the bush."

"No sooner was this excitement over than the bells were again set in motion, and the firemen had to buckle on their harness and start for the opposite end of the city to extinguish fires raging near the Rock Bay Tannery, and on the premises of Mr. Henry Rhodes."

"Fortunately no damage worth naming was done. The fire department certainly deserve especial thanks for the vigilance and energy displayed during one of the most scorching days experienced this summer."

The Packsack

OF GREGORY CLARK

AN elderly lady of my acquaintance is very fond of toasted nuts, cashews especially. And her numerous children, grand-children and friends are in the habit of bringing her gifts of them. But she has the amusing habit of carrying them off immediately, like a squirrel and sequestering them in her own room for her private consumption.

This is the subject of considerable merriment in the family circle. It is fun to watch her manoeuvres in spirit-lifting the unopened box out of sight before anybody, especially the young fry, might draw attention to it. The way she tosses the box on a table, negligently, and promptly covers it with a newspaper or a knitting bag; the way she struggles it away from there, all the techniques are a matter of delight and some pride to her family.

Due to the unforeseen circumstances of the stairs being painted, she was unable to carry her latest gift box upstairs, so she had to conceal it temporarily in a downstairs cupboard. Her son-in-law detected her in the act, and shortly after, pinched the box and hid it somewhere else.

The sight of grandmaw hunting for those nuts was an unforgettable addition to the family lore. She has reached the age at which she realizes she forgets. Round and about the house went grandmaw, lifting this, shifting that, an expression of growing confusion on her face as she casually opened cupboards and drawers, going back repeatedly to the place she had originally stashed them.

She dared not ask anyone if they had seen the box. Haug it, there were enough small children in the house, at the moment, to clean the box out completely in ten minutes.

She would sit and knit a few minutes, and then, on a sudden lurch, go and search in another place she might have hidden them. Finally, when she went to bed that night, and found the box under her pillow, she probably preferred to believe she had put them there herself rather than face the horrid fact that somebody was onto her.

Fun, Fact and Fiction

"An experimenter feels that spinach 10 feet high is feasible," says a news item. Feasible, perhaps, but not an answer to the world's cry for food.

Many people would commit suicide if they could do it without killing themselves.

A Boston salesman visited Texas and heard one particular Texan boasting about heroes of the Alamo who, almost alone, held off whole armies. "I'll bet you never had anybody as brave around Boston," challenged the Texan.

"Did you ever hear of Paul Revere?" asked the Bostonian.

"Paul Revere?" said the Texan. "Isn't that the guy who ran for help?"

A veteran umpire claims never to have been rattled by voices from the crowd. The thought that the fellow is also deaf is unkind.

WILLPOWER

Tax-harassed Canadians should get a smirch of grim humor out of unofficial reports that the new federal tax on top of other taxes on cigarettes has brought in little revenue so far.

Actually it is reported that the drop in cigarette tax revenue has been approximately equal to the recent increase in the new tax levy so that the government is no better off financially than it was before the hoist.

This seems to indicate that smokers either have almost as much willpower as the late Mahatma Gandhi or else they do not have as much extra spending power as Mr. Abbott thinks.

(From AP, INS, CP, Reuters)

Anglo-Iranian officials trying to settle the oil nationalization dispute at Tehran met again, and an official spokesman reported that an agreement on general matters had been reached.

British Lord Privy Seal Richard Stokes said that he hoped to present a definite proposal in general terms today for a general umbrella agreement under which a permanent settlement can be made.

Violence

Seven men in Amman, Jordan, are under arrest and two others outside Jordan are accused with them of plotting the assassination of King Abdullah, slain July 20.

At the Vocational Institute for Incurable Boys at Lancaster, Calif., Gilbert Hen Hernandez, 20, stabbed a guard to death after he had been admonished for sharpening knives. The dead guard was identified as Raymond L. Messer, 47.

United Nations

Far East sources at Flushing Meadows declared that the Communists at Kaesong are trying to provoke Admiral Joy into breaking off the Korean truce talks to shift blame for any collapse of negotiations to the United Nations. This, they said, would give the Reds an excuse for launching a new offensive.

Chief British delegate to the United Nations arrived in Ottawa for private talks with Sir Alexander Clatterbuck, British High Commissioner to Canada.

Deaths

The man who served as press secretary to Franklin D. Roosevelt all the 12 years of the New Deal, Stephen T. Early, died in Washington of a heart attack at the age of 61. President Harry Truman in a statement paid tribute to Early as a true patriot.

In Portsmouth, N.H., William B. Collier, designer of Admiral Dewey's famed flagship Olympia, died at 82. Collier laid down the lines at San Francisco for the cruiser in which Dewey led a U.S. squadron to victory at Manila Bay in the Spanish-American war of 1898.

The death toll of the head-on collision of a Marine troop train and a passenger streamliner at Simmesport, La., rose to 11 known dead when three more bodies were recovered.

Labor

In Timmins, Ont., a hint was dropped that the strike at Hollinger Consolidated Gold Mines may spread into a country-wide battle between the mining industry and the miners. The workers quit their jobs July 9 to enforce demands for higher wages and a union dues check-off.

Wage and subsistence increases were announced in Vancouver for all personnel on tugboats in British Columbia. A new agreement covers the period to Aug. 1, 1952, and provides for upward revision of wage rates at Feb. 1, 1952, in line with any increase in the cost-of-living index.

People

Two small Chicago girls who set out to see their hero, Roy Rogers and his horse Trigger, were stopped—985 miles short of their destination, Dallas, Texas. Police were called after grownups spotted 10-year-old Sue Hicks and Margaret Crocker, 8, eating in a yard. They had started out Friday night with a baby buggy well-stocked with food.

More meat is in store for rationed Britons as their allotment was raised by two pounds worth for next week. At the same time the food ministry announced that the cheese ration will be cut from five to 1½ ounces a week.

Predictions

Former U.S. Assistant Secretary of State said in Stockbridge, Mass., that a third world war could start this fall with a Soviet invasion of Yugoslavia.

The Senate finance committee in Washington was warned by Georgia's Chairman George (Dem.) that the federal deficit will total $40,000,000,000 within three years unless foreign aid and other appropriations are slashed by $5,000,000,000 or $6,000,000,000.

Mother Views Korean Scene

"Korea As a Canadian Mother Saw It" will be the subject of Mrs. Nora Rodd of Windsor, Ont., in a speech Tuesday night at 8 p.m. at Lower Crystal Garden.

Mrs. Rodd recently returned from a tour of North Korea under the auspices of the Congress of Canadian Women.

Tuesday night's address will be jointly sponsored by the Congress and the Victoria Peace Council.

More Arrests Hit Peron Foes

BUENOS AIRES, Aug. 11 (AP)—Police arrested more political and railroad leaders today in a crackdown on opponents of the Peron government.

Three students and a lawyer were jailed for giving out leaflets "inciting a railway strike." Others arrested include five engineers and firemen at La Plata, four railwaymen in Jujuay and seven in Salta Province.

The latest arrests came two days after the government instructed police chiefs to take measures to prevent sabotage it said is planned by "certain political groups" working with "imperialistic capitalism."

Yesterday the Peronista Party urged members to tell police of any attempts to promote sabotage.

A party statement said the time has come to "wipe out the swine made daring by our tolerance."

Pictures Being Taken In Millionth of Second

WASHINGTON, Aug. 11 (AP)—Photographs are being taken in a millionth of a second at the Johns Hopkins University physics laboratory.

A series of pictures has been obtained, for example, of the progress of a flame from the instant of its birth to the mature age of a thousandth of a second. The flame was produced in a hydrogen-oxygen mixture.

Common pins were etched to a small size and used as electrodes in the hydrogen-oxygen stream. A tiny electrical spark was passed between them to ignite the gas.

From then on photos were taken at a millionth of a second intervals as the flame progressed from a tiny, individual kernel of fire to ignite the gas stream and lose its individuality. These pictures are taken in connection with combustion studies and are used in studies of the amount of energy necessary to ignite a flowing gas.

Many other uses, however, are proposed for the technique. Many phenomena of nature take place in intervals measurable only in millionths of seconds and hitherto details have been beyond the reach of "investigators."

The photographic technique developed by the Johns Hopkins scientist might be considered as

Yugoslav Court Convicts Eleven

BELGRADE, Yugoslavia, Aug. 11 (AP)—Eleven defendants, including a Russian count and an opera singer, were convicted and sentenced today to stiff prison terms of up to 16 years on charges of spying for Russia. One defendant was found innocent.

Spy trials have become almost commonplace now in Yugoslavia since the break, more than three years ago, between Premier Marshal Tito's independent Communist government and the Soviet-led Cominform.

BEHIND THE SIGNS WITH Jim Nesbitt

Truth-Street in Fairfield was named for British Columbia's first Lieutenant-Governor after this province joined Canadian Federation. Hon. Joseph Trutch was born in England in 1826. He studied civil engineering, and in 1849 arrived in California, enticed there by the gold rush. He and his brother, John, reached Victoria in the late 1850's, and became two of B.C.'s outstanding early-day engineers. In 1861 Joseph Trutch was elected to the B.C. House of Assembly.

His wife was an American daughter of Louis Hyde of New York. They were a popular couple at old Cary Castle, and when he left the Lieutenant-Governorship he was knighted by Queen Victoria. He returned to live in his "Fairfield House," which still stands on Truth Street.

Lady Trutch died here in 1893, and Trutch returned to England, dying there in 1904.

Speedboats to Perform For Solarium Children

Water thrills are in store for children of the Queen Alexandra Solarium this afternoon. At least six speedboats of the Victoria Inland-Outboard Association will leave Victoria at 11 a.m. today to stage a two-hour water speed show on Mill Bay in front of the solarium. The vessels will be taken to the scene by trailer. The show will start at about 2 p.m.

Club secretary George Davis reports no such entertainment has been provided for the solarium children since before the war. "The last time we had such a program the kiddies were taking speedboats for weeks after."

WILL GET MODELS
After today's exhibition, the children will be presented with miniature speedboat replicas. The program has been arranged by Mr. Davis, Commodore Robert Watson and past commodore Brook Robertson. The latter will be in charge of today's event.

Meanwhile, the club is putting finishing touches on plans for its annual Labor Day speedboat regatta at Cordova Bay. Entries from throughout the Pacific Northwest are arriving steadily. Sideline attractions will include a water ski group from Vancouver, and the handling of a speedboat by Victoria magician William Harkness, who will be blindfolded for the occasion.

LONDON (CP).—When a man appeared in court charged with stealing scarce bananas from the Spitfields market, the magistrate asked if there was much piffing. A market seller replied "I am afraid it is an accepted part of market life."

SEA SONGS
A nautical medley featuring a group of sea songs by the contemporary composer P. J. Lang will also be heard.
Miss Pat Berry, Victoria vocalist, will sing several selections. Lieut. A. Collins, R.C.N.(R), naval information officer for H.M.C.S. Malahat, will be master of ceremonies.

Power Launch Sinks Near Point Atkinson

MARINE AND TRAVEL NEWS

The 53-foot power launch Silver Spray sank Friday night near Point Atkinson, at the entrance to Burrard Inlet, when it collided with a British Columbia Forest Service craft, the R.C. Scaler.

Mr. and Mrs. Roy Davis of Vancouver and their son Roland, 14, were rescued uninjured from the sinking launch. Later it was towed to shore.

Two forest service men also escaped injury.

DIEMERDYK DUE
The combination cargo-passenger ship Diemerdyk, new in the Pacific Northwest service of the Holland-America Line, will make her second visit to Victoria today. Docking at Ogden Point early this morning, she will discharge about 120 tons of general cargo loaded at Dutch, Belgian and German ports. From here the ship will proceed to Vancouver. George Paulin Ltd. is local agent for the line. The Diemerdyk is commanded by Capt. H. Oldenburger.

ARENA NEW LOOK
GALT, Ont. (CP). Patrons of the Galt arena won't be able to recognize the building when for the line. The Diemerdyk is commanded by Capt. H. Oldenburger. The weather ships berth at the drydock jetty by H.M.C.S. Naden.

TO RAISE DRYDOCK
Two giant derricks will be used Monday to raise the drydock which sank yesterday during a freak accident at Burrard Shipyard and Engineering Works in Vancouver.

Company officials said the dock submerged completely after it had been lowered to allow a repair boat to leave.

Colonist Reader 69 Years

A 90-year-old Victoria woman may have set a bit of a record for loyalty to the Colonist.

The paper was first tossed on the doorstep of Mrs. M. Marks, 135 Medina Street, in March, 1882.

Even 69 years does not change some things, she discovered.

OLD COMPLAINT
An editorial complained that a British publisher referred to Victoria as a "sleepy little place" whose citizens "take life easy" and "do a good deal of sauntering about the streets and abusing the government."

A story in the March 14 issue told of the first application for the building of the E. & N. Railway. "To be called the Vancouver Land and Railway Co., the line would be built 'without a money subsidy' the story told subscribers."

Looking through the advertisements in her 1882 Colonist, Mrs. Marks would have found that she could buy 24 loaves of bread for $1, a set of Nottingham lace curtains for $1.45 and get-room and board for about $2.50 a week.

DIVIDEND DECLARED
At a board of directors' meeting yesterday the Powell River Company Ltd. declared a quarterly dividend of 75 cents a share on the issued shares of the company in Canadian funds on September 15, 1951, to shareholders of record as of August 22, 1951, and holders of share warrants.

Fun for Children

Pacific Command Plans Picnic, Fair

Hundreds of children of naval personnel in the Pacific Command will have the time of their lives August 24 at the command's annual picnic and fun fair.

The fair will feature games, races, pony rides, a magician, ice cream and other attractions.

A check of March issues of the Colonist that year showed what Mrs. Marks read when she first picked up the "Daily British Colonist."

Wives of naval personnel—particularly those whose husbands are serving with the R.C.N.—in Korea are requested to communicate with the petty officers' mess at Naden before August 14 to register the names of children under 12 who will attend the picnic. Invitations and toys for the children will be mailed to them.

Arrangements have been made for bus transportation from the city to the R.C.N. lower playing field on Colville Road. Car parking space will be available.

Children of retired naval personnel will also be eligible to attend. Funds are raised by contributions from men in Pacific Command.

SHARES AT NEW HIGH
The semi-annual and quarterly reports of Canadian Investment Fund, Ltd., show outstanding shares at June 30, 1951, at a new high—total of 6,914,722 shares. Total net assets on that date amounted to $41,337,548. The company reports the balance of realized profits on sales of investments at $1,879,337, and in addition, it states that the quoted market value of investments exceeded their average cost by $8,767,388.

AMM-I-DENT HELPS REDUCE TOOTH DECAY because it is AMMONIATED

Amm-i-dent Effect Continues for Hours

The active ingredients in ammoniated dentifrices are Dibasic Ammonium Phosphate and Carbamide. Ammi-i-dent contains more of them than other brands. The ammonium-releasing effect of Ammi-i-dent continues for hours after its use. Just follow your usual brushing habits.

So don't wait. Change away from the tooth paste you were using while present cavities occurred. Change to Ammi-i-dent Ammoniated Tooth Paste.

Further Proof Provided

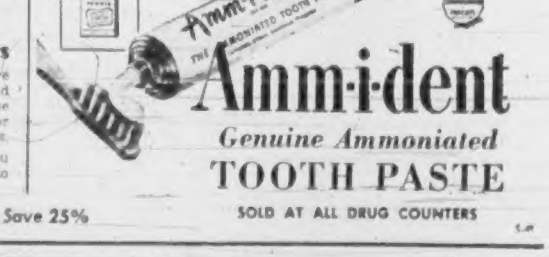

The ability of ammoniated dentifrices to reduce tooth decay was proved further by reports of new, extensive clinical tests. These tests proved conclusively that ammoniated dentifrices give greater protection against tooth decay than any method of brushing with ordinary dentifrice.

Give yourself, your whole family, the benefits of Ammi-i-dent. Why wait a single day. Change to Ammi-i-dent Tooth Paste or Tooth Powder now. Start the children, also, on this road to better dental health.

Change From Your Present Tooth Paste to Ammi-i-dent That Helps Reduce Tooth Decay

How many cavities did the dentist find in the teeth of your family in 1950? How many fillings were required? Are you still using the tooth paste you used when those cavities occurred?

Other people—millions of them—have changed to the ammoniated formula. Ammi-i-dent has evidence of many Ammi-i-dent users whose dentists did not find a single new cavity on their 1950 check-up.

Princess May Claim Tribute

WINNIPEG, Aug. 11 (CP).—The ancient and lawful tribute paid to reigning monarchs and heirs to the British throne by the Hudson's Bay Company likely will be claimed by Princess Elizabeth when she passes through Winnipeg on her Canadian tour.

Under the terms of the 16th century charter granted King Charles II in 1670, it was ordained that the company pay as tribute to his heirs and successors two black beaver skins and two elk heads.

The tribute was to be rendered, according to the charter, "whenever the reigning sovereign should enter into his territory of Rupert's Land of which... (the company) was created true and absolute lords and proprietors, subject to paramount sovereignty of his majesty."

Winnipeggers recall the performance of this historic rite in 1939, when Sir Patrick Ashley Cooper, as governor of the company, knelt before King George VI and, in the role of tenant, offered him the tokens.

The ceremony was held at the altar of the old Fort Garry, close by the confluence of the Red and Assiniboine Rivers. The historic gate served as a backdrop.

The Duke of Windsor, as Prince of Wales, received the same homage here in 1927.

MORE GLAMOUR?

VANCOUVER (CP).—British Columbia's junior farm clubs will be known as 4-H Clubs in future. The change was made because club officials felt that the 4-H name had a little more "glamour" than the official title of Canadian Boys' and Girls' Clubs.

Today's quotation: "How much better it is to live rich than to die rich."—Anonymous.

Saturday for everyone. Afternoon and early evening offer the best portions of the day for attending to matters concerning money or possessions, and extending hospitality. Catch an extra 40 winks in the morning.

Look for your birthdate and birthsign below.

March 21 to April 19 (Aries).—Morning: suppress your hopes, lavish projects. Afternoon: culivate your ties with both distant and local persons.

April 20 to May 20 (Taurus).—Morning: make a choice; you stand at the brink of controversy or an equal working arrangement. Afternoon: forge ahead.

June 21 to July 22 (Cancer).—Direct your energies toward bettering employment and physical standing. Deal with subordinates.

July 23 to Aug. 22 (Leo).—Steer a judicious course; your aspirations may be at odds with those of some key figure. Afternoon: seek relaxation.

Aug. 23 to Sept. 22 (Virgo).—Give an added measure of thought to the interests of kin, household. Be gay this afternoon.

Sept. 23 to Oct. 22 (Libra).—Employ some skillful management in matters affecting relationships and your ties with others.

Oct. 23 to Nov. 21 (Scorpio).—Resist the lure of tempting extravagances. Manage money sagaciously. Add to assets in afternoon.

Nov. 22 to Dec. 21 (Sagittarius).—Seek prominence for yourself and your interests; turn the tide in your favor by afternoon or evening.

Dec. 22 to Jan. 19 (Capricorn).—Turn the light of reason on your dilemmas or those of others; seek a favorable turn of events by evening.

Jan. 20 to Feb. 18 (Aquarius).—Morning: temper your emotions. Afternoon: make gains concerning intimates, cherished ones, and aspirations.

Feb. 19 to March 20 (Pisces).—Step forward in called upon and assert your initiative and executive talents this afternoon.

Planning ahead: Good for sociability, entertaining, etc.; around noon of Aug. 12; around noon of 20, 22, 24; afternoon of 25, 28, 29, 30.

For MONDAY, AUGUST 13, 1951

Today's quotation: "For what avail the plow or sail, Or land or life, if freedom fail?"—Ralph Waldo Emerson

Monday for everyone: This day is best used for attending to routine and ordinary matters. It does not lend itself constructively to starting new or important projects. Don't involve yourself in extra financial obligations.

Boarding School for Little Girls

New Term Commences Sept. 6

Extended Hours by Special Arrangement

Miss Elvidge has pleasure in announcing that the scope and premises of the school are extended and that, beginning with the September term, in addition to Kindergarten group, Years I and II will be enrolled, to be conducted by a certified teaching staff.

For MONDAY, AUGUST 13, 1951

Today's quotation: "For what avail the plow or sail, Or land or life, if freedom fail?"—Ralph Waldo Emerson

Monday for everyone: This day is best used for attending to routine and ordinary matters. It does not lend itself constructively to starting new or important projects. Don't involve yourself in extra financial obligations.

They are really starved and in bad shape. These evacuees are in the worst condition I have ever seen. Either they were terribly treated by the Chinese or else they were too scared to go out and look for food. They even ate poisonous grasses. And between the heat and flies they suffer badly from dysentery.

There are 11 permanent-type camps like Kanchon throughout Seoul Province, each with an estimated 19,000 inhabitants.

Specialized certificated teachers will conduct the various activities and it is felt that a first-class foundation school will result in a realization by small children that school life can be happy and satisfying.

Music, singing, dancing, handwork and physical training as well as the usual school subjects will engage the energies of the various groups and the children should be well qualified to take their places in the higher grades when the time comes to proceed to bigger schools.

Don't wait till the last minute for your school and college needs. Right now at Diggon's you'll find everything from ring binder to eraser... waiting your choice.

Remains of Big Marine Reptile Discovered in Manitoba Clay

WINNIPEG, Aug. 11 (CP).—The remains of a gigantic marine reptile that swam in a Manitoba sea about 75,000,000 years ago have been discovered near Morden, Man., 65 miles southwest of here.

L. T. S. Norris-Ely, director of the Manitoba museum, said the prehistoric monster is known as a mosasaur.

These long, sinuous sea serpents were as large as medium-sized whales and equal in bulk to many of the dinosaurs.

Distant relatives of the mosasaurs, the "monitor" lizards of the old world, still exist.

The first mosasaur remains were discovered in a sandstone River in 1780. Since then a number have been unearthed in other parts of the world.

The discovery was made by Walter Stephenson during mining operations in bentonite clay deposits about 10 miles northwest of Morden.

The jaw bone, which has been brought to the museum, is more than 40 inches long. The stubby teeth average more than two inches in length.

Actually the skeletal remains of at least two, and possibly more of the animals are contained in the jumble of bones being excavated by museum technicians. Enormous ribs and vertebrae have also been identified.

BONES SCATTERED

Area of the spot where the bones are scattered throughout the bentonite clay measures roughly 25 by 12 feet. But the bones are so mixed up it is impossible at the present time to make an accurate estimate of the length of the reptile.

Bones of another mosasaur were discovered in this area last year. This prehistoric creature has been estimated at 25 to 30 feet in length. However, bones of the latest find are nearly twice as large as similar bones of last year's discovery.

It is possible the monster may eventually be identified as a tylosaur, the largest type of mosasaur, museum officials said.

Boss Views Medical Care

Infectious Cases Packed Into Makeshift Hospitals

By BILL BOSS

Canadian Press Staff Writer

SEOUL, Korea, Aug. 11 (CP).—Typhus, said the Korean doctor, standing in the middle of the tent and its 40 or 50 wretched patients—North Koreans all.

Conducting a tour of the hospital improvised in the gigantic evacuee camp at Kunchon-Myeong, five miles east of Seoul, he had shown the "reception room," the hospital "office" and the "operating theatre"—various applications of the ordinary packing case draped with soiled white cotton—and then gone smack into the "wards."

The more than 800 patients in the hospital were only a fraction of the camp's 61,536 occupants. A further 500 were treated the same morning—until medicines and bandages ran out—at the clinic in another part of the centre.

"ISOLATED"

The doctor had said earlier that almost 300 of the cases were infectious diseases, but that they were in "isolation."

They were. They were in separate tents, slung bang up against the others.

"Typhus," he said, having led the visitor into the middle of the first tent, after the barn housing the surgical patients had been visited.

With decent haste the visitor led the way outside.

The party was at the far end of the next tent before the doctor turned and explained:

"Smallpox."

The interpreter was asked at the next tent's entrance what its patients had. The answer came: "typhoid."

There was a smile, a nod, the visit ended.

DEATHS LOW

Since the beginning of June more than 23,000 patients have been treated in this hospital, 8,000 of them with communicable diseases, amazingly, only 360 have died.

During the same period, 320,000 evacuees have passed through the camp—turned out of their homes in the areas adjacent to the front, both north and south of the parallel, and told to make their way into South Korea.

As many as 8,000 a day have been dusted with DDT.

As far as can be ascertained, not one of the hospitals organized in Seoul Province by the United Nations Civil Assistance Command has yet been visited by a medical officer attached to it by either the army or the World Health Organization.

The medical staff in their offices at headquarters and "advise," experienced disaster workers here say, the Koreans must first be "advised."

Only one, a Norwegian surgeon named Meyers, concerned himself with the plight of the Koreans to the point of going out and doing something personally about it. He performed as many as five operations a day in Seoul City relief hospital besides doing his paper work. "I'm really working myself into nervous exhaustion."

BEST THEY CAN

At Kunchon the five Korean doctors and 11 Korean nurses—several, just high-school girls pressed into service—do the best they can.

Ninety per cent of the evacuees are malnourished cases of varying degrees.

Says the colonel commanding the U.N.C.A.C. team in Seoul Province:

"They are really starved and in bad shape. These evacuees are in the worst condition I have ever seen. Either they were terribly treated by the Chinese or else they were too scared to go out and look for food. They even ate poisonous grasses. And between the heat and flies they suffer badly from dysentery."

Grades I and II Included In Westerham School Plan

Westerham School, on Cranmore Road, has been expanded to accommodate Grades I and II.

Although the school was originally begun as a kindergarten, in response to many requests from parents, Miss Kathleen Elvidge has decided to expand it.

A new residence is being built to provide extra classrooms.

Thus, kindergarten and primary groups as well as grades I and II will find a happy field of young endeavor at the enlarged school.

Won't Block Boost Bid, Milk Distributors Say

Vancouver Island milk distributors will not oppose producers' bid for a milk price increase at Monday's hearing, as long as it is not granted at the distributors' expense.

B.C. economist Dr. Robert Clark, distributor representative, said yesterday he was not attending the hearing to fight the producers.

"Of the present 21 cent price," he said, "the producer now gets about 13 cents and the distributor about eight."

Some distributors have expressed, however, that distributors might not eventually ask for more money in their turn if the inflationary tendencies continue at the present rapid rate.

With an open mind, he said, "If the farmer has a case, then he is entitled to an increase. It mustn't come at distributors' expense, though."

It is believed the producers will ask for $1 a hundred pounds increase, which would mean about two cents a quart to consumers.

Dr. Clark said he could not create, but Dr. Clark said they would not take an "antagonistic view."

PORTSMOUTH, England (CP) — A visitor who couldn't resist picking flowers from the civic gardens sent a letter of apology with a $1 note to council as compensation.

Here is the first flight photo of the new Super-Constellation, longer and more powerful transport ordered in record quantities for commercial and military use.

It is designed to accommodate from 47 to 93 commercial passengers, or 110, as a troop transport. Airlines have ordered 62 new ships, worth about $1,500,000 each. Plane is built with reserve strength for later installation of compound and jetprop engines, latter capable of 400-m.p.h. speeds. It is now considered the most popular "standard" transport craft in the U.S.—Central Press Canadian.

Language Barrier Not Serious

Twenty-one Mexican women have discovered that Victorians are not knee-deep in snow the year around and at least some of the population are neither Mounties nor loggers.

They appeared to be impressed with Victoria, especially its sunshine—and although few of them can speak English, the language barrier is doing little to dampen their enthusiasm for sightseeing.

The largest travel group, to come here from Mexico, they are being shepherded around by tour director Emma Elizondo, here in Canada for the first time like the rest of them.

The majority are from Monterey, a bustling hive of industry in Northern Mexico and Mexico's second largest city.

"We read about Victoria in travel folders," said Miss Elizondo, who has run her travel agency for six years and seen most of the United States, Cuba and Europe because she "likes to see new places."

She never advertises her trips; contacts are made through friends and her family.

The Victoria schedule calls for a tour of the city today and some shopping Monday before taking the midnight boat to Vancouver and then a train to Banff.

"This is very much like England," said Miss Elizondo, who made the trip there last year.

HONORED IN PORTLAND — The visitors were royally treated in Portland, where the mayors presented them with carnations and the Chamber of Commerce saw to it that they missed few of the sights.

Only two minor incidents have marred an otherwise well-ordered schedule that Miss Elizondo mapped out for her party: one woman lost $20 in a Pullman car between Portland and Seattle; another lost $50 in Portland but retained her passport, a most important item.

None of the group had ever heard about Banff before.

Now they're counting the days until they can get a good, close-up look at a bear and see some of the big, snow-capped mountains that the travel folders have told them about.

Sun Blinds Driver; Damage Said $200

Damage estimated at about $200 was caused last night at Cook and Quadra when a motorist was blinded by the sun and collided with a parked car.

Saanich police said Charlotte Robertson, 895 Lansdowne Road, was the driver of a car which struck another, owned by Edward W. Hanning and parked at 3327 Cook.

Rufe Davis Plans Visit to Veterans

A visit to the Veterans' Hospital will be made Sunday by Rufe Davis, radio, stage, screen and television actor.

The animal impersonator will be the guest of the Victoria Shamrocks in making the visit. Several of the Shamrocks will accompany him.

Arrangements for the visit were made following a Shamrock game which Mr. Davis saw in Vancouver last week.

Bettors Burn at Delay Of Exhibition Park Race

VANCOUVER, Aug. 11 (CP) — A crowd of 15,000 became impatient today when the last race at Exhibition Park was held up for more than half an hour to allow the mutual wickets to take more bets.

The fans began stamping their feet at the delay while the horses paraded up and down on the track. Veteran trackmen said it was the first time there had been such an occurrence at the park.

The Gallantry of the British Policeman

They Do Not Carry Guns Truncheon Only Weapon

By EX-SUPT. BOB FABIAN
OF SCOTLAND YARD

NOT long ago the body of a crazy Derek Poole, petty thief, deserter and murderer, was carried out of his gas-filled home in Chatham, England, and laid on the sun-baked pavement.

After he had been besieged for two hours in one of the most sensational gun battles in British police history, the police found him lying shot with his stolen Sten gun at his side.

A few hours before in St. Bartholomew's Hospital, Rochester, 33-year-old police constable Alan Baxter died. It was a bullet from the same gun, fired by Poole, which ended his life.

Those who saw Poole as a madman, though they were a mad dog. He was hunted like one. And he died like one. There is nothing to regret in his fate.

But the death of Constable Baxter, who, without dramatics, went unarmoured to arrest a known trigger-happy criminal, points up once more the quiet gallantry of Britain's uniformed policemen.

When I went to see Chicago's chief of police the walls of his office were covered from floor to ceiling with photographs of officers killed in the line of duty. Fortunately, the office of the metropolitan police commissioner will never look like that.

FOUR HAVE DIED

But it may come as a shock to some people to reflect that Constable Alan Baxter was the fourth British policeman to be murdered by gunmen since the start of the Second World War.

Constable Evan Davies was shot in a hand-to-hand struggle in December, 1941, while questioning two youths. They escaped and were never brought to justice.

Police Sergeant William J. Avis was killed in February, 1942, while searching a house in Beggar Regis.

And on the night of February 13, 1948, Constable Nathaniel Edgar was killed at Southgate, London, while attempting to arrest gunman Donald George Thomas.

Not one of these officers was armed. When a British policeman is forced to carry firearms it is an event. A special record is made in the station books. And that's how the man on the beat likes it. He's quite content to rely on his own right arm, and occasionally, his truncheon, in subduing would-be "bad men."

KNOWS HIS DUTY

But he's under no illusions that he's taking his life in his hands when he goes out to bring them in. A thug who has killed once will never be scrupulous about killing again. For he knows that whatever happens, he's facing the hangman's rope.

Let's go back to that morning in February, 1948, when Inspector William Arthur Moody and three constables went into a house in Stockwell, London, to arrest a man named Donald George Thomas.

They found a man named Thomas in the house. He was a young man, about 25 years old, with dark hair, wearing a dark suit and a white shirt. He was looking at them with a calm, steady gaze.

Inspector Moody stepped forward and said, "Come with us, please." Thomas looked at him for a moment, then he nodded and followed them out of the house.

As they walked down the street, Thomas kept looking back over his shoulder at the constables who were following him.

Under his pillow, Thomas had a small, dark object hidden away. It was a .38 Smith & Wesson revolver, the same one that had killed Constable Baxter.

Thomas was a young man, but he was a professional criminal. He had been in and out of prison many times, and he was used to dealing with the police.

He knew that the constables were only looking for a man named Donald George Thomas. He knew that they were not looking for him.

So he decided to make a run for it. He turned back and looked at the constables who were following him.

He saw that they were all looking at him. He saw that they were all looking at him with a steady, unflinching gaze.

He saw that they were all looking at him with a steady, unflinching gaze. He saw that they were all looking at him with a steady, unflinching gaze.

He saw that they were all looking at him with a steady, unflinching gaze. He saw that they were all looking at him with a steady, unflinching gaze.

He saw that they were all looking at him with a steady, unflinching gaze. He saw that they were all looking at him with a steady, unflinching gaze.

He saw that they were all looking at him with a steady, unflinching gaze. He saw that they were all looking at him with a steady, unflinching gaze.

He saw that they were all looking at him with a steady, unflinching gaze. He saw that they were all looking at him with a steady, unflinching gaze.

He saw that they were all looking at him with a steady, unflinching gaze. He saw that they were all looking at him with a steady, unflinching gaze.

He saw that they were all looking at him with a steady, unflinching gaze. He saw that they were all looking at him with a steady, unflinching gaze.

The Inspector told him he could use his handkerchief. Quick as a flash, his hand flew to his hip, and came out holding a tiny, silver revolver. Before he could use it he was overpowered. As he was taken to the cells, he snarled: "You're lucky to have got me like this, EXCITING BATTLE."

My most exciting battle against the menace of the pot-smoker, however, was the killing of brave little Alex de Antiquis in April, 1947. For a time it certainly looked as if it was going to be a case of "the gunman or us." If the gang headed by Charles Jenkins and his buddy, Christopher Geraghty, got away with it, London was headed for a reign of terror. Every crook would be carrying a gun and shooting his way out of trouble.

Yet there was little in the physical make-up of these young thugs to show how deadly they were.

Fair-haired, 23-year-old Jenkins was a clean-looking youngster, who draped his 5-feet 9-inch body in smartly-cut clothes. On his eyes—cold, grey and unwinking—hinted that he was the killer type.

Geraghty—nearly six feet tall and thickly built—looked more than his 22 years. Facially, he was startlingly like Derek Poole. He was always well dressed, and his dark hair was worn with stylish "sideburns." His closely set eyes had the later stare that his fingerprints were bitten to the quick, and veins pulsed in his temples, face and neck—warning signs in any experienced detective.

GANG WAS ARMED

I arrested Jenkins on a Sunday afternoon. Antiquis had been murdered by a bullet from a .38 Smith & Wesson.

The killer was a young man, but he was a professional criminal. He had been in and out of prison many times, and he was used to dealing with the police.

He knew that the constables were only looking for a man named Donald George Thomas. He knew that they were not looking for him.

So he decided to make a run for it. He turned back and looked at the constables who were following him.

Nesika Illahee

(Our Land)

By FRANK KELLEY

HAVING made a study of the history of the island, I have been struck by the fact that the information available on the history of Vancouver Island is so meagre. I thought in 1949 it was about time to pass it on to anyone who might be interested in the island's past. Ronald Marston, at the time Vice-President of the Canadian Pacific, was headquarters at Vancouver, and I had the honor to meet him. He was a man of letters, and I intended publishing in map form.

As that was not the objective I had in mind when I started to make notes, after hearing prospectors' testimony the fact there was so little information concerning the island's history and rock formations available, the offer was not accepted. Instead, I copied an Admiralty chart of the island, plotted the approximate geology and the location of all metals I had heard about up to 1909.

FOR INFORMATION

This map was checked by my old friend, W. M. Brown, who said it contained a lot of information which should help in the development of Vancouver Island from a mineral angle. It was published by the late H. E. A. Coombs, a friend, and copyright and passed on to me. The Mines Department and the Canadian Pacific have been informed.

Fabrication of this map, somewhat because it was for mineral getting, was accompanied with a friend, who had acquired some Vancouver Island timber in the vicinity of Quatsino Sound, some of whom had been studied by "Dad" Larson. The Lillian Small at Quatsino who spent some time at Quatsino Sound, where he made numerous soundings, and I gave him some information which was later confirmed by the C.N.R. surveys. As things happened, all that is water under the bridge" now.

BOAT PURCHASE

One of the Texan's first moves—a happy one from my corner, was the purchase of a seaworthy boat, enabling him to do some probing into west coast inlets as fancy dictated. The Lillian Small, purchased at Seattle and brought to Quatsino, was a 30-foot motor launch and had become too small for the traffic. About 30 feet in length, the Lillian was practically all cabin, the seating accommodation running down the side of the cabin.

SAILING ADMIRALTY

Admiralty from a harbor in the Strait of Georgia with the engine out of commission, it did not appear so bad as we realized we had a mast and a sail to help out. It was not much but proved decidedly worthwhile when a favorable breeze after several hours of calm motion sailing, carried us in near the head of Hecate Bay, Hecate Island, where we anchored off a night, while the beach. There we took the dingy down and after several days of tinkering, coaming and drying out the parts, managed to get it working.

At that time it wouldn't show as of, and we had to back track a bit, but we had a lot of fun. BOOKS

By W. T. GALT

Is the novel getting out of date? Last week this column reported United States gossip that novel sales seem to be getting less and less each year while sales of non-fiction books improve steadily.

Similar rumblings about the fate of the novel are coming from Great Britain.

V. S. Pritchett, writing from London in the Aug. 3 New York Times, runs up a few more trouble signs.

The Oxford Union recently staged a full-dress debate on the subject, Pritchett points out, and came to the conclusion that on the whole the novel is improving.

But Pritchett immediately puts his finger on the trouble spot by quoting a critics' reaction to the debate: "Would it not be a good thing if the novel stopped improving?"

There's nothing new about that complaint. The "good old days" are harked back to in literature as often as they are in any other field, and with an little reason.

But Pritchett backs it up this time by adding that the amount of good taste, good education and sensitive perception of the world among young contemporary English novelists is almost shocking.

This means that most new novels are being judged on their style alone. In "a more robust age" their content would have been given an equally close scrutiny.

However, Pritchett goes on. "When one of the young critics signed for a rash, untidy host of great merits and great faults, he was raising the old question of whether we can again expect genius in the novel."

"I sometimes fear that the novel is becoming out of date in England," he adds.

Another sore point in Britain these days is the effect on novelists of the Labor Government.

In the same New York Times article, Pritchett quotes Herbert Read as saying that "high cost and high taxation were the ruin of the Roman Empire; they certainly drove the Romans out of the city, into the countryside. British authors were driven out almost 10 years ago."

Pritchett goes on to observe gloomily that "authorship, as it existed in the last 100 years is a dying profession."

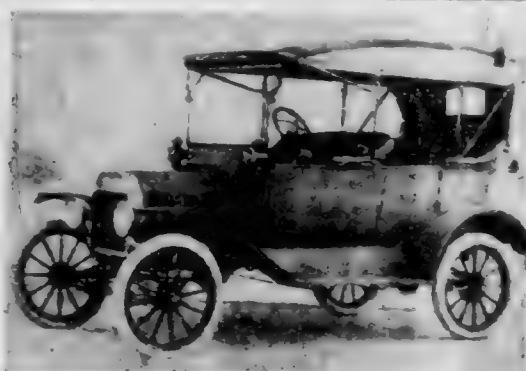

"Liberal society used to support writers; Socialist, managed or monopoly society does not."

"It is more efficient to cut reading down to a handful of best sellers, and of course the mind of the public is more easily controlled if that is done."

Canada, with its gloomy Massey Report findings on the state of letters, is not the only country with literary problems.

The first British edition of Canadian author Robertson Davies' "The Table Talk of Samuel Marchbanks" appears slated for big things in Britain. It has been enthusiastically reviewed over there and "prospects for its Christmas sale are extremely encouraging," its publisher, Clarke Irwin, reports.

A. I. Cronin is finishing off a new "spiritual autobiography" in which he will tell what he's learned about life as a physician and writer. It will be published sometime next spring.

The question of "what makes the wheels go around" is adeptly answered by juvenile fiction writer Henry B. Lent in "O.K. For Drive Away" (Macmillan, $3.25), which tells youngsters all there probably is to tell about automobiles from the days before the Model T Ford (above) on. Starting with times when scoters shouted "get a horse," Mr. Lent trails the evolution of the horseless carriage right up to now, when "if every driver took four persons with him, everybody would be on wheels at the same time." "O.K. For Drive Away" tells primarily in picture and words, how cars are designed, assembled and tested. Mr. Lent takes readers through a sample tour of the huge Packard plant in Detroit.

Provincial Library Display Shows Stylish New Books

Dressmakers aren't the only ones holding fashion shows these days.

Right now you can see what the well-dressed book is wearing by a trip to the Provincial Library.

For the next two weeks, the library is holding an exhibition of the hundred best-designed British books of 1950. The exhibition, arranged with the co-operation of the British Council, has come directly from London, where it was shown in the main display rooms of the National Book League as a part of the Festival of Britain.

This display, which will be shown in South Africa and Australia as well as throughout the rest of Canada after it leaves Victoria, joined with the hundreds of exhibitions and displays in Britain this year in pointing up the remarkable recovery that British manufacturers and craftsmen have made since the war period.

IN FRONT

It shows especially that British publishers are once again in the very front rank as far as the production of books is concerned. Although still handicapped by a shortage of paper and materials for bindings, the publishers are turning out books that you would be pleased to keep on your bookshelves.

And what is more important, they are producing these books at prices that most of us can afford.

This is one of the things you notice first about the books on display. Except for two or three volumes which have obviously been designed for the carriage trade, the books in the collection are not expensive.

NAME

There are even a number of pocket books, well-printed, brilliantly illustrated, and serviceably bound, which would shame many of our North American publishers and their high-priced volumes. Obviously British publishers don't feel that good design means an expensive book.

The exhibition also shows that British publishers believe that good design is not one of the things resented by the pouncing bookworms.

that appear on so many of the American and Canadian book jackets, and that the value of the jacket design does not vary inversely with the amount of material on the book's shelves.

Two of the many jackets in the display have been donated by John Piper, one of Britain's outstanding artists, who concentrated on the plans for the Festival of Britain and the gardens at Battersea Park and almost all of the others are models of good taste and appropriate design.

DONT MISS

With so many unusually good books to praise it is difficult to single out for special mention. But certainly no one should miss the "Memoirs of Christienne de Chateaufort" with its beautiful drawings; "Prince Indrag" printed on stone grey paper with the informal sketches reproduced in brown ink; or the Golden Cockerel's contribution, "Pasiphae," a genuinely distinguished production upholding the reputation of this press.

Poetry Book Prints Raves

"Songs of the Singing Poets," by Les Alden (John & John, Louisville, Kentucky, $3.75).

This spectacularly printed book contains a poem "Women's Work" by Les Alden, which has according to the book itself won acclaim from many world diplomats and been translated into more than a score of languages.

RAVES

The five notches four famous people including the late Prime Minister Mackenzie King, in most cases fail to say whether it was one poetry or its message for peace that they liked.

The poem calls upon women to summon up their reserves of spiritual strength and intuition to keep men from going to war with one another.

The book is profusely illustrated with photographs of the author. Many of the poems are printed as white handwriting on a black scroll.

According to the book the author is a living legend. In Mexico they call her "The Green Virgin," in the Far East she is known as "The Lady of the Amethysts" in the Near East she is "The Female Gibran."

NEW NAME?

Perhaps some Canadian will find a new name for her after reading her famous poem which starts:

"I am not of all living things. Thou great, unknown force behind all life. Help me to be the woman I am meant to be. The nightmare of the future is something at me...."

Women's Work

By HELEN HALL

MAKING a dress for a woman is just as hard as making a pair of shoes. It is not as simple as it looks. It is a job that requires a lot of skill and patience. It is a job that is often overlooked.

So it is not to be surprised, applying to the women's work, that first, the women are the first to be asked to do it. And then, the women are the first to be asked to do it.

To start with, always make clothing before putting in the starch. Starch is a very important part of the dress. It is what makes the dress stand up. It is what makes the dress look like a dress.

If you hang starched clothes out outdoors in dry, windy or humid weather they may go limp. In these cases, it is best to use indoor drying facilities.

Colored clothes should be turned inside out before starching, so that any excess or unevenness of starching does not show on the wearing surface.

RECIPE OF THE WEEK

Sunshine Picnic
(Makes 5 Pints)

- 18 medium carrots
- 6 medium cucumbers
- 2 large green peppers
- 6 medium onions
- 2 sweet red peppers
- 2 cups white vinegar
- 3 1/2 cups sugar
- 1 teaspoon celery seed
- 1 teaspoon white mustard seed

Grate vegetables, using medium blades, the food chopper. Combine grated vegetables with remaining ingredients in a large kettle. Add 1/2 cup of sugar. Stir for 15 minutes. Pour in hot water. Use for hot dogs and hamburgers.

Turn starched garments to the outside before starching and ironing. Starched garments should be ironed on the wrong side.

A Modified Silhouette

Above is a thin worsted in charcoal and lighter grey for this dress from the fall and winter collection. Sleeves are cut with under-arm depth, and the front of the dress is hooked beneath a black suede belt. The tubular stole is black-dyed rabbit faced with wool.

By ANNE VATES CLARKE

There is no one fall silhouette, but many. The slim, mod-like figure is as smart as ever, but there are more full-skirts shown than in the past season or so. These, however, are not quite as full.

The pyramid coat is giving way to mod, but with a twist. The mod wrap, barrel silhouette is fast taking a place with the others.

Skirt lengths are unchanged except to be slightly shorter in a few houses. Favor pants about knee length and long over-the-knee. A very few are in bellows at the knees and a little wider at the hem.

whole with every smallest detail, every accessory designed to go together is the important look. An increasing number of houses are showing special accessories with the clothes.

SMALL DETAILS

Small details that make suits, costumes and dresses individual are of great importance in autumn and winter collection. Good costumes composed of wool, dress and jacket of a poodle-like cloth are fairly simple, but such details as a matching at the dropped shoulder, long sleeves that shape the neckline and collar, and a little of the hair, and a small detail, make a costume a costume.

Tips for Teens

By ELSOR WILLIAMS

If you want the fun of being invited to a friend's summer home, be sure to be on good manners. Your hostess won't be happy if you leave that attitude. After all, if you disrupt the house and your hostess will be a gruesome thing to the entire family you visit in a house.

To ensure your invitation comes from the mother of your friend, be sure to pack your bag. An invitation from your girl or boy friend is not enough, as far as etiquette is concerned.

2. Arrive on time to avoid school buses, etc.

3. Consideration for the family you are visiting means that you avoid causing extra work, nobody wants more work in summer or at a vacation spot. Be on time for meals. Hang up your clothes. Make your bed. Help with chores like dishes and errands.

4. Leave the bathroom in good condition for the next user, nobody wants to clean up the mess you make. Don't leave your bath towel in a damp heap on the floor, hang it up to dry in the right place.

5. Don't pay too much attention to your girl friend's date. Friendly, that's all.

6. If a date is arranged for you, be friendly and agreeable, even if he's not your idea of a dream boy. He may be making the best of the situation, too. If you like him at once, don't try to make the date a romance; take it easy until you know more about him and how he feels. He may have a steady date at home, for all you know.

7. When you leave, thank the hostess for her hospitality and write them a thank you note the next day. Be sure to thank your friends, too. A small hostess gift will show your appreciation.

Even horses get in the act. Miss F.W. Wallace of Toronto, who is pretty photogenic herself, sets up a pair of tally-ho nags before she steps back to press the button.

Now as a tourist and as a sight-seer, you find out of the street from every pocket the world of cameras to squeeze a camera in. Everywhere you go, you find to leave the camera behind in the room.

Along the causeway there is a gathering of people. Some are taking pictures of the people, some are taking pictures of the people.

And then there is a group of people. Some are taking pictures of the people, some are taking pictures of the people.

A group of people are taking pictures of the people. Some are taking pictures of the people, some are taking pictures of the people.

Wilford E. Raymond, of Los Angeles, sat Mrs. Raymond down on Legislative lawn to take her picture, and found he was being photographed himself. Mr. Raymond's parents came from Somerset.

Miss Gloria Steiger of Auburn, Washington frames herself against Legislative dome as she kneels to catch good view of sweep of Causeway. Victoria is one of most photographed cities in North America.

Captain Ann K. H. U.S. Army, Bill Howard, Texas, came at the party with a camera to take pictures of the people. Some are taking pictures of the people, some are taking pictures of the people.

Mrs. Marion Warner, of Sacramento, California, the cause here on Legislative lawn. Some are taking pictures of the people, some are taking pictures of the people.

Board May Pare Plans for School

More Pictures of Princess

After 37 years with Central Press, Fleet Street, London, photographer William Atkins of 719 Pandora Avenue is again looking forward to taking pictures of Princess Elizabeth during her forthcoming visit here. Mr. Atkins, a free-lance cameraman whose pictures appear regularly in The Colonist, says he had photographed the Princess in England since her early childhood. The English photographer came to Victoria in 1947. (Colonist photo by Jim Ryan.)

Aircraft Manufacturers Visit City

Leaders of Aircraft Industries Association of United States were among those on Victoria tour yesterday. Left to right were J. H. Kindelberger, association chairman; W. Allen, Boeing Aircraft Ltd. president; and Admiral D. C. Ramsey, U.S.N., retired. Association policy was reviewed yesterday in Seattle and U.S. war production estimated at 1,000 to 2,000 planes annually. Association members in side building, background, include: who help each other in general production problems. (Colonist photo by Jim Ryan.)

Summer at Sooke...

Daily Colonist

Victoria, B.C., Sun., Aug. 12, 1951 21

Fresh sea breezes, rolling, untroubled hills and a pastoral peace combine to make Sooke a delightful spot to live in or just to visit.

Left, enjoying a quiet moment at "Ravenna," the home of Mr. and Mrs. H. C. Gates are Mary McMillan, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. C. H. McMillan, Mrs. Robert Averman, Diane Averman, the Rev. H. M. Boston, vicar of Holy Trinity Church, Sooke, and Mrs. Joseph Gates. One of the loveliest gardens in Sooke "Ravenna" is a popular spot for garden parties.

Logger Would Call Flunkies Stewards

"Wanted: Stewards for International Woodworkers of America camps."

That sign is wanted by at least one I.W.A. member, James Ray, of Camp Woss, Englewood, says he prefers the word "steward" to plain "flunky."

A "flunky" is a low, cringing, Jacky, subservient type of person according to Webster and I don't think any worker should be that type or referred to as that," Ray said yesterday.

Ray has his own ideas about the how term originated. "In the past some worker with a big head and no brain tagged the name of flunky on his fellow workers in the cook-house."

The contract name for a cook-house helper remains "flunky," he said.

In a letter to the I.W.A. executive, Ray said he hoped that the name could be changed as

I.W.A. Leader To Speak In Vancouver

James E. Faddling, international president of International Woodworkers of America (I.W.A.), will be a guest speaker at the annual convention of the Canadian Congress of Labor at Vancouver next month.

Also expected September 17 and 18 is James Carey, secretary of the C.I.O., C.C.L. officials said yesterday.

An invitation has been sent to Walter Reuther, president of the United Automobile Workers, in the hope that he and other prominent speakers will be heard.

Voices Protest Over Square

A protest against putting any more monuments in Pioneer Square has been voiced by Linn A. Gale, 1002 Vancouver Street.

In a letter to Mayor Percy George, Mr. Gale claimed the beauty of the park is being spoiled by the erection of monuments. If monuments are to be erected, he suggested that they be placed along the back or side of the square.

Under discussion was the erection of a 16-foot Gaelic cross to replace the old wooden Vimy cross. Unveiling is planned September 30.

J. F. Murray Dies, Aged 80, On Mainland

James F. Murray, 80, Vancouver post office official and former employee of Victoria post office, died Thursday in Vancouver.

Mr. Murray, a native of Oxford county, Ontario, came to Victoria in 1888 and from 1890 until 1905 he worked at Victoria post office. In 1905 he was transferred to Vancouver as assistant inspector, later rose to be inspector of the Vancouver postal district and then district superintendent of postal services. He retired in 1937 after 47 years of service.

Mr. Murray was a member of Victoria I.O.O.F. and the Pioneers Association.

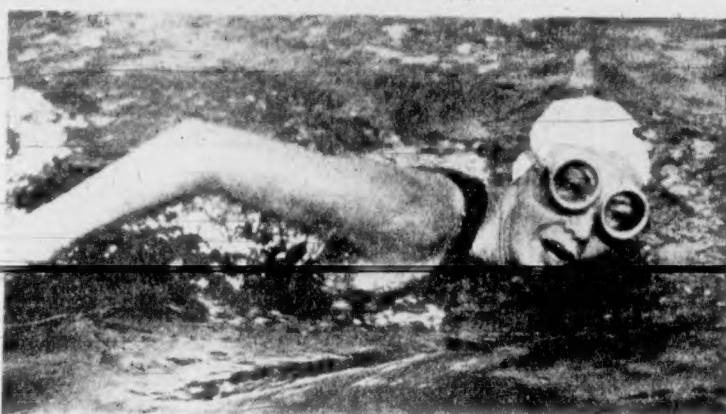

He is survived by his wife, Jessie, and a daughter, Dorothea, both of Vancouver, and a sister, Mrs. Edgar Burns, in Portland. A son was killed during the First World War.

Funeral services will be held tomorrow morning at Nunn & Thomson's Funeral Chapel, Vancouver, with Dr. A. M. Sanford officiating. Interment will follow at Forest Lawn Memorial Park.

Newspaper Contest Draws Crowd

Thirty-Six Poised to Try Channel In History's Top Swimming Circus

DOVER, England, Aug. 11 (INS).—Thirty-six persons, including 13 women, were poised on both sides of the English Channel today for the biggest free-for-all swimming circus in channel history.

Florence Chadwick, 32-year-old San Diego, Calif., typist, and Betty Cohn, 51-year-old Brooklyn, N.Y., grandmother, today postponed their attempts. They may try tomorrow, weather permitting.

Miss Chadwick last year swam from France to England in the record women's time of 13 hours and 28 minutes. Now she will try to be the first woman to lick the channel in both directions.

Fourteen others—Englishmen, Frenchmen and Danes, are queuing on both sides of the 21-mile-wide channel, and 20 more contestants arrived in Calais for the big mass competition sponsored by The London Daily Mail's offer of $19,600 in cash prizes.

NO AMERICANS

No Americans are entered in The Daily Mail contest.

Thirteen men and seven women from 10 nations are in the newspaper contest. The first man and woman across will receive $2,800 each and a Festival of Britain cup.

Cash prizes of $1,400 each will go to the second man and woman to make it through the rough, cold water. Every other successful contestant will receive $700.

Roy Sparks Sutter, 37, of Fort Worth, Texas, had entered the contest but was forced to withdraw by a leg injury.

The ancient Prussians and Britons regarded the oak tree as sacred.

ASTHMA MUCUS Loosened WHILE YOU SLEEP

Don't let coughing, sneezing, choking, recurring attacks of Asthma or Bronchitis ruin your sleep and energy another day or night without trying MEDIDACO. This great medicine is not a smoke, injection or spray, but works through the blood, thus reaching the lungs and bronchial tubes. Usually the first dose starts helping nature immediately 3 ways: 1. Helps loosen and remove thick mucus. 2. Thus promotes freer breathing and sounder, more refreshing sleep. 3. Helps alleviate coughing, wheezing, sneezing. Get MEDIDACO from your druggist. Satisfaction or money back.

Park Games In Saanich Led by Boy

Eleven-year-old David Dawson piled up 15 points to lead Reynolds Road Park children picked up 52 points to lead the 14 parks competing. Playfair Park was second with 32 points and Rainbow Park third with 28 points.

Cedar Hill Park defeated Hampton Park 21-1 in an exhibition softball game.

The games, which included track and field events and novelty races, were under the direction of parks sports supervisor Ralph Cozier.

LONDON (C.P.)—A truck stolen from a parking lot in London later was found undamaged, with the motor still running, 15 miles away at Barnet. But its load of meat valued at $150 was missing.

CHOCOLATES and TEA

We know a lady who eats a chocolate or two with tea in the afternoon, and as a sort of "night cap" in the evening.

It's good for business, but we can't recommend the practise.
